

ROOSEVELT NOTE STUNS CONFERENCE

BACK TO WORK
DRIVE STUDIED
BY PRESIDENTCABINET MEMBERS
VISIT CHIEF ON BATTLESHIP

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
Annapolis, Md., July 3 (AP)— Abroad the cruiser Indianapolis
out in Chesapeake Bay, President Roosevelt today received from his cabinet officers their plans
for national recovery.

He focused his attention upon
a domestic drive which he is convinced can bring a great measure of betterment to conditions
in this country, regardless of how world plans develop at the world economic conference.

The unusual cabinet meeting
on board a battleship was described by sea-faring cabinet members as "almost entirely social,"
but they left with the president
the plans for the back to work
movement they have been drafting during his two-weeks vacation.

Eager to open the domestic recovery movement on its return
to the White House Wednesday morning, the president took over the plans for study tonight and tomorrow.

The cabinet members who boarded the Indianapolis today
after considerable hesitation because of the choppy waves of Annapolis roads were the officers concerned with the domestic situation.

No one was present from either
the state or treasury departments. Mr. Roosevelt was standing firmly on the statement sent today to the London economic parley, opposing immediate stabilization of currency until the gold bloc which has been demanding it can show that their currencies are ready for a fixed ratio with those of the United States and Great Britain.

The president was principally interested in the data brought to him by Secretaries Ickes and Ro-
per, the chairmen, respectively,
of the public works and industrial recovery boards.

Ickes said he had ready a list
of projects for immediate work.
His board has been called to meet on Thursday to name those projects after they have been scrutinized by the president.

Roper said "we are making real progress" on the industrial stabilization campaign. He detailed the steps that had been taken toward fixing of codes of work and wages for the various industries.

The other cabinet members
aboard the Indianapolis for the three-hour luncheon session with the chief executive included Attorney General Cummings, Secretaries Dorn, Swanson and Wallace and Assistant Secretary
Roosevelt of the navy.

The president also showed considerable interest in the report of Secretary Wallace on the progress of the farm relief program. There was understood to be some consideration of cutting down on the proposed $150,- 000,000 fund for wheat and cotton growers.

Mr. Roosevelt after chatting with his cabinet aides sent them
ashore across the three-mile stretch of choppy seas aboard a submarine chaser and remained
on the Indianapolis for the night.
He has plans to leave the cruiser tomorrow and return
late in the day to the White House by motor.

There was a possibility, however, he might remain out in the

HURT IN CRASHFilm Actor Has Concussion of Brain After Plane Mishap

Municipal Airport, Los Angeles,
July 3 (AP)—Hoot Gibson, who clipped to fame in pictures on a horse, took to an airplane today
in a special match race at the national air races and wound up in a hospital with concussion of the brain or a possible skull fracture received in a crash witnessed by 25,000 spectators.

The gray-haired Hollywood actor, long a sportsman pilot, clipped to the ground after rounding
the second pylon in a 15-mile race against Ken Maynard, another actor who stars on horseback and spends much of his leisure flying airplanes. The two were flying
for a trophy donated by Will Rogers,
film humorist.

Gibson was catapulted from his ship as the motor struck the ground.

He was unconscious when ambulance attendants dragged him
from the ship but recovered
quickly and, with the aid of nurses at an emergency hospital,
walked into a dressing room.

Dr. George Berg, who attended
him, said:

"Gibson received severe cuts
and contusions and a severe concussion of the brain. He is resting easily, however, and is fully conscious. There is a possible chance of a skull fracture which
a complete examination may reveal. A cursory examination indicated he had no broken bones.
He suffered a severe shock, but we have hopes for his recovery."

The plane was destroyed. Gibson said he "just couldn't figure out how it happened," but pilots
who saw the plane crash believed
he had given it too much ruder
on a turn and slipped into the ground from an altitude of about 200 feet. Maynard circled quickly and landed near the plane. He dragged his friendly rival from the wreckage and the race ended there.

The day's program included an unsuccessful attempt by Col. Roose Turner, winner Saturday of the transcontinental speed dash
from New York to Los Angeles,
to break the world land plane
speed record of 294 miles per hour set at the races in Cleveland
last year by Major James H. Doolittle.

FACTOR'S SON
TRYING TO GET
RANSOM FUNDINVESTMENTS MIGHT BE TURNED INTO
CASH MONEY

Chicago, July 3 (AP)—The atmosphere was charged with expectancy tonight as mysterious emissaries came and went from the hotel room where "Jake" Factor's attorneys directed their hunt for the kidnapped millionaire.

In mid-afternoon the departure of a messenger with a bulging envelope gave rise to the report that part of the Factor investment portfolio was being turned into cash
for the ransom.

From the room itself no new word was forthcoming. There was a reiterated denial that any communication had come from the abductors.

"I stand ready to pay the $75,- 000," said Jerome, 19-year-old son of the missing international speculator, adding in the next breath
that he had "not got the money raised yet."

Detectives chased phantom clues
across northern Illinois, hunting
the hint of the kidnapers, while the Factor family waited in their several luxurious hotel suites waiting to hear the climax of this latest sensational chapter in the Factor novel.

Crash False Clue
A squad car went shrieking up through suburban Niles this afternoon on the receipt of a telegram from a New Yorker purporting to tip off the rendezvous of the gang.
The police, ever suspicious of the Touhy gang but never seeming to meet personally any of its members, though they had discovered
the Touhy address at last.

On the top floor there was nothing.
On the main floor a respectable citizen of Niles was amazed at this special attention from police, and they went away satisfied the telegram was a hoax.

In Des Plaines, officers found
the reputed residence of the Touhys had been vacant for ten days or so, and in Lake county
other officers began a tour of the northern Illinois lake resorts that have furnished well hidden tryst-
ing places for Chicago gangsters.
Aside from announcing hunts for the Touhys, the Chicago police have taken an inactive part in investigating the kidnaping and one lieutenant who had been working on the case at first withdrew today.

Adding to the general belief that

Weather Reports
Delay Departure of Italian Seaplanes

Londonderry, Northern Ireland,
July 3 (AP)—The departure for Reykjavik, Iceland, of the squadron of 24 Italian seaplanes bound for Chicago was delayed today
after General Italo Balbo, Italian minister in command of the armada, scanned reports telling of unfavorable weather over northern Greenland.

The planes arrived here yesterday from Amsterdam, the second stop of the flight which began at Orbetello, Italy, Saturday.

After a long sleep, General
Balbo and his companions arose
early, prepared for the 930-mile
hop to Reykjavik, but the Lough
Boyle, on which they alighted
Sunday, was hazy and weather
reports were unfavorable.

Reports were completed on the plane of the flight commander
and another flying boat which were slightly damaged in a collision with a refueling boat. The work was done by Italian mechanics in the Londonderry shipyard.

Roosevelts Desert
White House Today

Washington, July 3 (AP)—A White House that fairly overflowed
with fun and frolic today will be almost deserted tomorrow as the sea-loving Roosevelts celebrate Independence Day aboard
the Indianapolis.

Traveling in their individual
ways, three members of the Presidential family today made the White House a port of call.

Mrs. Roosevelt flew in from Campobello yesterday. Her daughter, Mrs. Anna Dall, arrived this morning. A few hours later, Franklin, Jr., who had been aboard the cruiser with his father,
came with his chum, Drexel
Paul, to shop for a trip to Europe.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughter planned to motor to Annapolis
tomorrow morning to spend the Fourth of July with the President.
Mrs. Roosevelt will return tomorrow evening to take the midnight train to New York, where she will see Franklin, Jr., and his four traveling companions off for Europe.

CRASH VICTIM

RUSSELL BOARDMAN

BOARDMAN DIES
OF HIS INJURIESNoted Aviator Hurt in Crash of Plane in Race Saturday

Indianapolis, July 3 (AP)—The adventurous career of Russell
Boardman, 35-year-old Boston and Springfield, Mass., aviator and sportsman, was terminated today
by death.

Injuries suffered last Saturday
while streaking down the runway
of the Municipal airport here caused his death. He had landed to refuel while racing across country in the New York to Los Angeles air derby. During the takeoff in resumption of his westward flight a cross wind caught his tiny ship and sent it spinning out of control.

Boardman, dragged beneath the craft as it struck the ground,
wheels up, suffered a fractured skull and a punctured lung. He never regained consciousness.

Flew Across Ocean

For nearly forty-eight hours,
however, a spark of life remained,
giving his wife an opportunity to reach here by air from Providence, R. I., and his brother, Earl time to come from Albuquerque,
N. M. Both hurried here by air.
The brother was with him when he died. Mrs. Boardman, worn by anxiety and a long vigil, had left
a few minutes before when physicians advised that she obtain some rest. Grief-stricken she left for Boston this afternoon by airplane
to await the arrival of her husband's body there.

Boardman, who had distinguished himself by a non-stop
flight from New York to Istanbul, Turkey, in 1931, in company with John Polando, was counted one of the country's leading pilots.

He had narrowly escaped death
several times during his daring career. Shortly after becoming a pilot his plane was wrecked during a takeoff at Cottonwood, Ariz.,
and last summer at Springfield, Mass., he was in a ship that went spinning down from a height of 1,600 feet, landing in a clump of trees. In the latter accident his suffered injuries from which he was several months recuperating.

He also had close calls while engaging in motorcycle racing and piloting speedboats before taking up aviation.

July Fourth Snake
Fight on Program

Springville, Calif., July 3 (AP)— Springville is going to have a Fourth of July snake fight.

The "battle royal" between a score of rattlesnakes and an equal number of king snakes will not be stopped by the law even though the Los Angeles Humane society
did protest. Constable A. P. Hubbe announced today.

"Dude" Butch, who gathered and trained the snakes, favored the king snakes, deadly foes of the poisonous rattlers, to win.

M. E. Dewitt, justice of the peace,
obtained a report from the district
attorney which said the humane
law of California did not include the word reptile.

grain are beaten into the mud and other heavy property damage lies in the wake of the summer's most terrible storm.

The storm cut through Adams
and neighboring counties, swept

Rail lines were washed out and other forms of communication

President Refuses
To Join Movement
To Return to Gold

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, July 3 (AP)—The world monetary and economic conference stopped dead in its tracks today, stunned by what was interpreted here as President Roosevelt's evident commitment of the United States to a managed currency and a flat refusal to participate in any program to protect or return to an old-fashioned gold standard.

As Premier Ramsay MacDonald, president of the parley called a meeting of the bureau, or steering committee, to chart the course of the conference for tomorrow, the declaration came from the highest British quarters that there was no question of the parley having collapsed.

Conference Sidetracked

The Premier called the meeting of the bureau after British authorities had met with representatives of the European gold bloc, which has threatened to leave the assemblage unless reassured concerning monetary fluctuations.

A bombshell was thrown into the conference by an uncompromising statement by the American chief executive which not only pushed aside overtures from France and oth-

Doell Takes His
New Prison Post

Marquette, July 3 (Special)—
William R. Doell, of Ishpeming,
new warden of the Marquette prison, formally took over his duties
there Saturday, July 1, the date on which his appointment became effective. Mr. Doell received official notice of his appointment Saturday morning and went to the prison at once.

James P. Corgan, former warden, said yesterday that he probably would remain at the prison this month to give what assistance he could to Mr. Doell. Mr. Corgan's
plans for the future are uncertain
as yet, he said. He has not decided whether he and his family
will reside in Marquette or return to Ontonagon where they lived until Mr. Corgan was appointed warden here in 1922.

LONDON NEWS
FLARES STOCKSRoosevelt's Message to Conference Promises
U. S. Inflation

BY JOHN L. COOLEY
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, July 3 (AP)—Uncle
Sam's big explosion of fireworks
at London today ignited his markets at home and prices flared up spectacularly.

Stock and commodity exchanges, inflamed by what they regarded as the inflationary tone of President Roosevelt's message to the economic conference, handled
huge volumes of business as traders read "higher prices" in the pointed statement of the chief executive.

Leading shares climbed $1 to
more than $19 under a momentum of buying that reached its peak as the market was closing
and the final Associated Press
5-t-a-n-d-a-r-d Statistics composite,
$92.26, was the highest since September, 1931, the day's average gain was $5.49. Sales totaled 6,746,659 shares.

Dollar Exchange Flips

Wheat, in a nearly vertical rise, swarmed up to its best prices of the last three years, and other grains were strong. Cotton today touched the best levels since the spring of 1931, but its extra-appreciation of around $2 a bale
was not fully maintained.

By the same tokens, dollar exchange flopped badly. United States currency going to fresh lows in terms of European monetary units. Sterling lifted to $4.484, up 14 cents, compared with its old gold standard parity of $4.85 5-8. French and Swiss francs, Dutch guilders and the belga also reflected the news that America did not intend to stabilize the dollar temporarily.

While markets left no doubt as to how they viewed the president's statement, quieter corners
of the financial community privately expressed their approval
of his message. High banking quarters pointed out that the position of the United States had been made clear and that the fog of confusion which had clung to the currency question had been dissolved.

Some bankers privately characterized Mr. Roosevelt's remarks
as a "rebuke" to the foreign gold bloc. His assertions should, they said, remind London delegations that the future fortunes of the dollar were primarily a matter for internal decision and that stabilization talk at this juncture in the domestic price-raising program
was dead.

Temporary stabilization has been viewed apprehensively by

er gold countries that currency be stabilized temporarily, but also criticized sharply
what was characterized as an attempt to side-track the conference from its broad objectives.

"I would regard it as a catastrophe amounting to a world tragedy," declared the president's message to the conference as introduced by Cordell Hull, secretary of state, "if the great conference
of nations called to bring about a more real and permanent financial stability and a greater prosperity to the masses of all nations should
in advance of any serious effort to consider these broader problems allow itself to be diverted by the proposal of purely artificial and temporary experiments affecting the monetary exchange of a few nations only."

"Such action, such diversion,"
the declaration continued, "shows
a singular lack of proportion and failure to remember the larger purposes for which the economic conference originally was called together."

Meanwhile, the determination of the British to finish the work
of the conference was evident, although it was admitted that short cuts may be essential and haste
may be necessary.

While agreeing that immediate stabilization of currencies must be abandoned in the light of President Roosevelt's statement,
the British were insistent that many points on which an agreement can be reached outside of the currency question remain.

Announcement that the steering committee has been summoned drew no response from the headquarters of the gold bloc
countries, except the indication that the meeting would witness a debate over the future of the parley.

Leaders See the End
The gold bloc forced adjournment of important committee
meetings to Wednesday or Thursday, pleading the necessity of conferring with some of their governments over the crisis into which the negotiations had been slung.

Some leaders said flatly that this was the first step in ending
the conference.

Mr. Roosevelt's assertions that

President Refuses To Join Movement To Return to Gold

"This is not the time to dissipate gold reserves," was interpreted in some important conference quarters as a definite suggestion to the remaining gold countries, which had been insisting upon protection, to give up the fight and abandon a free gold standard.

"Our broad purposes," the president's declaration said, "is permanent stabilization of every nation's currency. Gold or gold and silver can well continue to be a metallic reserve behind currency, but this is not the time to dissipate all reserves."

"When the world works out concerted policies in the majority of nations to produce balanced budgets and living within their means, then we can properly discuss a better distribution of the world's gold and silver supply to act as a reserve base of national currency."

Even the United States delegation was stunned by the bombshell, and it was authoritatively learned, hastily sought new instructions.

Experts felt that Mr. Roosevelt's statement that the United States seeks the kind of dollar which would have the same purchasing power as the gold standard, and calling upon their central banks to cooperate to that end.

Gold Bloc Enraged

"Let me be frank in saying that the United States of America seeks the kind of dollar which a generation hence will have the same purchasing and debt-paying power as the dollar value we hope to attain in the near future," asserted the president. "The objective means more to the good of other nations than a fixed ratio for a month or two in terms of the pound or franc."

Members of the gold bloc were frankly stirred to wrath and issued a joint statement reiterating their intention to maintain the gold standard, and calling upon their central banks to cooperate to that end.

The declaration was signed by France, Belgium, Holland, and Switzerland, and by two countries off the free gold standard, but maintaining gold parity of their currencies—Italy and Poland.

The American delegation was thrown into confusion over a resolution which Senator Key Pittman had introduced in a monetary committee, and which already had been accepted in part, calling for a return to the gold standard as soon as practicable.

Some delegates thought that in view of the president's message the resolution might have to be withdrawn although Senator Pittman's plan was modification of the old gold standard in reducing minimum metallic reserves and calling for optional use of one fifth silver.

Many quarters, including some of the American delegates, were frankly skeptical over keeping the conference alive in view of the accentuation of the bitter conflict on monetary viewpoints by the president's blunt statement and assertions in some gold bloc circles that the United States was endeavoring to wreck the gold standard in the few countries where it remained.

A vigorous rise in the Amsterdam Bourse, interpreted in some London financial circles as indicating a flight from Dutch guilders to currencies, did not soothe the feelings of the gold group although Dr. L. J. A. Trip, head of the Bank of the Netherlands, said no danger could touch the gold countries "so long as the public remains cool."

In the meantime, a move to adjourn the various committees had been started.

Swiss May Return

The Swiss delegation was understood to be expecting orders instructing them to return home, with only a few secretaries left on the job.

Late in the day the committee on subsidies postponed its work until Wednesday and the committee on commercial policy adjourned until the following day. When the French gave notification that they could not attend a meeting of the subcommittee on reestablishment of the international monetary standard that body adjourned sine die.

Walter Runciman, chairman of the British board of trade, was understood to have blocked a Swiss move for adjournment of the drafting committee without date. He insisted that two or three days must suffice.

Senator Pittman's silver group was among the few slated to meet tomorrow.

The gold bloc representatives met Neville Chamberlain, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Montagu Norman, head of the Bank of England, at the British treasury after issuing their joint statement, but there was no indication that the British were likely to join them in assuring protection of their currencies.

Norman was reported as strongly favoring such action but Chamberlain was understood to be opposed.

Conference observers saw considerable significance in a report in well informed quarters that the British were preparing to issue a statement simultaneously with the gold group in which it was pointed out that the British were likely to join them in assuring protection of their currencies.

It was indicated in some British quarters that a managed currency might be taken up by the conference in view of the president's attitude, although it was felt unlikely that the gold bloc would participate. It was pointed out, however, that if the British and their dominions, together with the Scandinavian countries, which are under Sterling influence, could be drawn into such discussions they might make con-

Lip Reading and Vibrations Make Deaf Babies Talk

Jacksonville, Fla. (AP)—"La-la-la-la."

This sound is a familiar one in the pre-school department of the Illinois School for the Deaf.

Here tiny babies are being taught to speak, though they never will hear their own voices.

"Ah-ah-ah; uh-uh-uh; ne-uh-uh," they babble holding their hands to their teacher's throat and to their own to catch through vibration the sounds they are imitating.

A pioneer in working with deaf children of pre-school age, the Illinois school has 14 pupils ranging from three to five years. They live, eat, study and play in a neat white farm house set apart from the regular school.

Don't know names

Most of the babies come to the school without the knowledge, even that they have a name, said Dr. D. T. Clough, managing officer. This knowledge must be grasped through lip reading.

Soon the children respond to their names, as perceived on the lips of their teacher, Miss Margaret Seyster, and they gradually learn the names of common objects. Commands also are taught.

Visitors are amazed at the children's ability to obey such commands as: "run," "jump," "fall down."

"Where is your arm?" the teacher asks a first year student. She strokes her chubby little arm.

"Now say 'arm,'" the teacher commands.

"Arm," responds the proud youngster in well-modulated tones, that a hearing child of that age might well emulate.

"The voice of the young deaf is soft and natural," Miss Seyster explains.

A Big Task

"When we realize that a hearing child has an active vocabulary of several hundred words at the age of 3 or 4, and between 2,000 and 3,000 at the age of 6, we can readily see the enormous task before the child, the teacher and parents."

The elements of speech are taught gradually in the two-year pre-school course inaugurated here in 1920. Tongue exercises, breathing exercises, palate exercises, lip reading, lip trills and tongue trills all contribute to their training.

Case histories of the children reveal that diseases, such as, fever, double pneumonia and meningitis, have caused most of the deafness. Only two of the cases are congenital.

At St. Louis, the only member of baseball's Big Six to see action yesterday, held to his six-point lead in the American League half of the sextet when he connected with one hit in three times at bat. The blow left him with the same average, .371, six points in front of Joe Judge, the Senator's manager, and a like number of points back of Chuck Klein, who is setting the pace in the National circuit.

Douthit Traded to The Blues Retires

Kansas City, July 3 (AP)—Outfielder Taylor Douthit, who was traded by the Chicago Cubs last week to Kansas City of the American Association, today announced his retirement from baseball.

Douthit informed President E. Lee Keyser of the Kansas City club while visiting relatives here, that his insurance business in California made him independent of baseball as a means of livelihood.

The Cubs obtained Jim Mossitt in the deal by which Douthit was to have joined the Blues.

Seeded Stars Win Without Difficulty

Chicago, July 3 (AP)—Seeded stars moved down members of the dark horse brigade without even removing their wraps today as the big battle for the national clay courts singles tennis championship opened at the Chicago Town and Tennis club.

Frankie Parker, of Milwaukee, seeded number 1, waded through two Chicago foes to romp into the third round. He dropped Lowell Lammons, 6-1, 6-0, and followed through with a 6-1, 6-3 triumph over Carl Becker, ignoring a sore arm as he scattered a remarkable base line shots with monstrous regularity.

Right behind him came his conqueror in the Tri-State championship last Saturday, Wes Bryan Grant of Atlanta, Ga., the only Georgian, standing only five feet four inches and weighing 120 pounds, drew a bye for the first round and then measured Art Kainer, Chicago star, for a 2-6, 6-3 victory. Grant is seeded number two.

Weather Bureau Started Here in 1871; Four in U. P.

There appears to be little likelihood that the U. S. weather bureau office in Escanaba will be eliminated under the economy program recently announced from Washington. Altogether, only 23 stations in the United States are to be discontinued, and it is felt here that because of the amount of shipping that is done at this port the maintenance of the bureau here will be deemed essential.

There are four weather bureaus in the upper peninsula—Escanaba, Marquette, Sault Ste. Marie and Houghton. Harvey Spindler is the observer here, with Howard Kenny as assistant. The office was established here in 1871, and is now located in the federal building.

June Weather Report
The temperature reached its highest mark of the year on the last day of June when the thermometer recorded 93 degrees, according to the monthly meteorological summary issued by the local weather bureau office. Two other extremely warm weather days were noted on June 29 and 27 when the temperature was 91 degrees.

June was truly a month of extreme variations. On the 14th of the month a light frost was noted and the mercury tumbled down to 40 degrees. The excess in temperature for the month was 5.6 degrees, and the accumulated excess since January 1 was 495 degrees.

Rains 2.34 inches
The total precipitation during the month was 2.34 degrees. The greatest amount of rainfall in a 24-hour period was .66 inch on June 7. Eleven days were clear, 14 partly cloudy, five cloudy, and days on which .91 inch or more of precipitation occurred numbered 11. Thunderstorms were heard on 11 different days.

Business Codes Are Difficult, Johnson Finds

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Daily Press Washington Correspondent

Washington.—The attempt to put the country back on its economic feet by putting everybody back to work is attended by innumerable complications, many of them intricate.

That became apparent during hearings on the cotton textile code and officials of the recovery administration make no secret of the job's difficulty and the uncertainty as to how some of their plans are going to work.

The code had been formulated and presented when it suddenly was realized that its operation might be largely spoiled by the "strutabout system" in the cotton mills. Some manufacturers undoubtedly would make workers handle an unreasonable number of looms or spindles and could thereby defeat the main purpose to increase employment—while waging unfair competition. So a committee was quickly formed to study that problem and do something about it.

Loopholes
Another loophole, not yet plugged, rests on the fact that mill owners frequently own the homes and often the towns where their employees live. The recovery administration hasn't figured out yet what it can do if the competitors, upon establishment of minimum wages, raise rents and other charges to take care of increased costs.

The administration was amazed at the number of different interpretations which could be placed on different codes, no matter how clear their language might appear, and at how many unexpected conditions might be discovered in the affected industries.

Gen. Hugh Johnson is expected to create some form of simple machinery which can settle differences as to interpretation and application as quickly as possible. Otherwise, he fears, he might suddenly find a large part of the program all tied up.

And of course there's still the big worry that factories will create a sudden glut of production before the national purchasing power is geared to handle it. Johnson and his aides still regard themselves as in a race to get their program in effect before the recent spurt in both production and buying has time to sag and be followed by a reaction which they fear might be serious.

Mrs. Ramsey's Aims
Mrs. Mary Ramsey, chairman of the advisory committee which is charged with protecting interests of the consumer while the industrial codes are being framed, is the daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, railroad magnate, and is called "the richest widow in Washington." She dresses plainly and her interests range far outside the social racket. She is said to have inherited about $25,000,000.

She has studied the possibilities of and attempted to promote a national co-operative economic system. She has been active in both producer and consumer co-operatives—among the latter the Emergency Exchange Association, leader in the barter movement—and in unemployment relief work in New York.

She runs two stock farms in Virginia and her experience with them led to her intense interest in commodity, community and consumer co-operation. She lives in a house here with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

Employers Asked To Submit Names Of New Workers

A request that employers furnish to the city welfare department the names of any persons who have been given work of late was made yesterday by F. F. Davis, city welfare director.

The information is desired so that a check can be made with the list of unemployed who are receiving groceries and other provisions from the welfare department.

It is expected that about thirty-five families will be taken off the welfare list about July 19. This is about the time the first checks will be coming in for the families, who have young men enrolled in the Civilian Conservation Corps. The men working in the forestry camps are receiving $30 monthly, $25 of which is sent to their dependent families. Unemployed men, who have been given work at various local industries, also will be receiving their first pay checks soon, after which they will be removed from the welfare list.

By notifying the welfare department concerning new employees hired, employers will help the welfare department in guarding against the giving of relief to those who are not deserving.

KIWANIS CLUB HEARS EATON

Life Saving Program Is Explained by Red Cross Worker

An interesting explanation of the life saving program of the American Red Cross was presented by Robert F. Eaton of Duluth, Red Cross representative, in a talk before the Kiwanis club at the Ludington hotel yesterday noon.

Mr. Eaton has been here the last three days to review the work of four local candidates for certificates as life saving examiners. The following four were certified by Mr. Eaton to carry on the Red Cross program of junior and senior life saving tests: Joel Olson, Irene Roland, Naomi Vi-nette, Escanaba, and Tom Masterson, Gladstone. He also gave several life saving demonstrations for the benefit of the fire, police and sheriff's departments while here.

More than a million persons in this country are now trained in life saving under the Red Cross program, but in spite of the great amount of safety promotion work that is being conducted the toll of deaths by drowning is still at a frightful figure, Mr. Eaton said. The speaker said that from 7,000 to 8,000 persons lose their lives annually by drowning, and he emphasized that July and August are the peak danger months.

Mr. Eaton explained the various phases of the Red Cross life saving program and also described the actions of a person while in the act of drowning. Various life saving methods in the event of such mishaps were also described.

The speaker spoke highly of the work of Mr. Olson as life-guard at Ludington park, explaining that the Red Cross organization is very appreciative of the cooperation that has been given by him toward the advancement of its program here. Mr. Eaton left last night for Wausau, Wis.

Peltier Brothers Build Dance Hall On Old State Road

Construction started Monday on a new dance hall and recreation garden which is being built by John and Joseph Peltier on the former state road, about four miles west of Escanaba.

About 20 men will be employed on the job. Ground was broken yesterday for the foundation, which will be constructed by Samuel Mills, local contractor, and the building proper will be of matched logs eight inches in diameter. The plans call for a ball room dancing floor 50 by 80 feet. All the latest type of equipment and fixtures will be installed throughout. A beer garden will be run in connection with the dance hall, and a spacious picnic grounds and parking lot will be laid out in the adjoining grove. It is expected that construction will be completed in about a month and a half.

A recent survey on four New Jersey main trunk highways, especially designed for safety, proved that 80 per cent of the fatalities occurred at night.

LET'S GET OUR SHARE

WHILE other cities are laying definite plans for obtaining their share of federal funds that are to be distributed within the next few months, for public works to provide employment for jobless men, only a comparatively minor program has yet been developed for this city. The city of Chicago is planning on obtaining millions for a sewage disposal service; the city of Detroit is proposing a gigantic new sewerage system; the cities of Grand Rapids and Muskegon are formulating great public park projects; the council of the city of Lansing last week named a special committee to devise a program that will permit that city to obtain its share of federal funds that are to be parceled out.

It is generally recognized that the communities urging their claims the most vigorously will be the ones that will most readily win recognition. Funds appropriated by the congress and the president are going to be spent and communities assuming a backward attitude will find themselves left out in the cold and holding the bag.

Escanaba is one of the most important ports at the head of the lakes. Because of the natural harbor boasted by this port, in spite of its importance, the government has never been called upon to expend a single dollar for either its development or maintenance. Efforts to secure federal appropriations in the past for a breakwater off the north shore, to serve as a shelter for small craft, have failed largely because of inability to prove sufficient necessity.

But there still remains the south shore, to develop which only intermittent efforts have been made. It can be definitely proven that much of Escanaba's future growth depends upon the development of its natural advantages as a tourist and resort center. And it can be definitely proven that facilities provided by nature for this development are not sufficient.

Running northward from Portage point to Ludington park there lie several hundred acres of land, now covered by a few inches of water, that could be reclaimed through the construction of a breakwater, and converted into one of the most magnificent air ports in the United States. Air transportation is in its infancy and the use the future will make of such a port will alone warrant the investment.

In addition such a project will reclaim land for public golf courses and much needed play grounds. It could provide a shelter for small craft that would prove of inestimable value to this city and district in future years. In addition it could be made to provide for Escanaba a bathing beach, where there would be no danger of contamination of the water, such as is presented at the present beach.

The city of Escanaba, in a smaller way, until federal aid can be secured, could well be using its unemployed labor for which it is now providing subsistence, in the development of at least a portion of a project that will prove of monumental value to this community in future years.

POLITICAL TRAGEDY

WHATEVER time may develop as to the right or wrong of the controversy, there is something at least bordering on tragedy in the break in relations that has occurred between Gov. William A. Croom and Edward N. Frensdorff.

The governor and Mr. Frensdorff are time tried war horses of the Democratic party, in Michigan. For years they stood side by side, battling for a cause and a party they believed to be right.

They took turns in campaigning for the governorship in years when they knew their cause to be hopeless. They gave not only their time and their energy, but their private funds in the battles for what came to be their common cause. To many they became the Damon and Pythias of the Democratic party in this state.

And then came a year when their party was overwhelmingly swept into power. When Mr. Croom was inaugurated as governor of the state, it was a generally accepted conclusion that his fellow battler of unhappy days would become one of the right hand advisers of the chief executive. Mr. Frensdorff was temporarily placed in a position of power and authority and within six months it developed that his ideas and those held by the governor, as to policies, did not coincide. The denouement came last week when Mr. Frensdorff was dropped as director of prison industries in the state. It is unquestionably true that the governor is responsible for all state departments under his control and the state's chief executive is thoroughly in the right when he insists that his policies must be carried out in those departments.

But it must be considered as at least unfortunate that these two outstanding leaders of the party, now in power in Michigan, could not have maintained their friendship in victory as well as in defeat.

MAKES FIGHTING REPUBLICANS

THERE are thoughtful Republicans in Michigan, of course confined exclusively to those not holding political jobs—who regard the wholesale substitution of Democrats for Republican office holders, as one of the most salutary things that could happen to the Republican party in this state. Every Republican separated from a job becomes a potential fighting partisan for his party in the next campaign and that, it is explained, is something the party has lacked, in sufficient numbers, for the past several years.

By those who assume this view, it is complained that many Republicans holding down state jobs, through years of success of the party to which they claimed allegiance, had grown fat and careless—as campaigns rolled around they expected continuation in office as a matter of course and many of them failed to continue active party workers.

It is pointed out that each of the hundreds of men and women now supplanted by Democrats, will regard their dismissal as a personal affront and when the next campaign develops they will be impelled to render to their party something more than the passive service, to which they had become accustomed.

Of course, this rule will work both ways, for the newly appointed Democrats will also be out fighting for their jobs, but the man with a political job is more likely to grow fat and careless than the fellow who is on the outside looking in.

RUSSIAN TRADE AWAITS

SENATOR George W. Norris of Nebraska issued a little statement on trade with Russia the other day which is worth close attention.

"I have learned on reliable authority," says the senator, "that the Russian government desires to buy in the American market $10,000,000 of meat products, 1,000,000 bales of cotton and $400,000,000 worth of machinery. She can make payment partly in kind and partly in money, but must have several years in which to complete the transaction."

"She proposes to ship us products of which we import a large proportion of what we use. She proposes to ship these products and apply the proceeds upon her debt."

To a country which for years has been looking frantically for customers, this sounds like important news. If Senator Norris's information is correct, somebody down at Washington ought to see to it that this deal is consummated.

ABOLISH CHILD LABOR

IT is the best sort of good tidings that the cotton textile code

BARGAIN BRIDE

(By NEA Service)

BY KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

CHAPTER XVIII

Bessie called out, "Who is it, Sexton?" and her son answered, "Cousin Elinor." Bessie was up in an instant, hurrying to the hall. Elinor clung to her.

"Come in! Come in!" barked Jim. "Just in time for dinner!" A moment later Elinor sat looking at the faces about the table. Sexton had brought a chair for her. Bert was getting the silver. Elinor was crushed because provides for the end of child labor in that industry.

Before we rejoice too much, though, we might look at some statistics.

There are in the United States more than 650,000 children between the ages of 10 and 15 who are listed by the census as "gainfully employed." Only some 29,000 of these are employed in the textile industry. This code, excellent as it is, only touches a small fraction of the children who ought to be classed as school pupils instead of wage earners.

Furthermore, all of these industrial codes are designed as emergency measures only. We have no guarantee they will be in effect four years from now.

We might just as well do the job right and ratify the child labor amendment. That would affect all industries, and it would be permanent.

FOR THIS ONE DAY

I wonder what you think, Old Day,
For this one day flown from the crag,
Run up the pole, and hung once more,
For this one day, above the door,
Perhaps you are rejoiced to be,
For this one day, where you can see,
Perhaps a little understand,
For this one day, how fares the land.

I think you say, "So many laws!"
And yet I had a single cause."
I think you say, "So many creeds!"
And yet one God met all my needs."
I think you say, "So many clans!"
I knew but one, Americans."
I think you say, "So many, too."
Who doubt, and yet the flag came through."

For this one day we'll hoist you high,
Or cheer you as you're passing by,
For this one day the citizen
Shall rule America again,
For this one day no clan, no class,
Shall seek advantage o'er the mass,
For this one day we'll think as one,
Then haul you down when day is done.

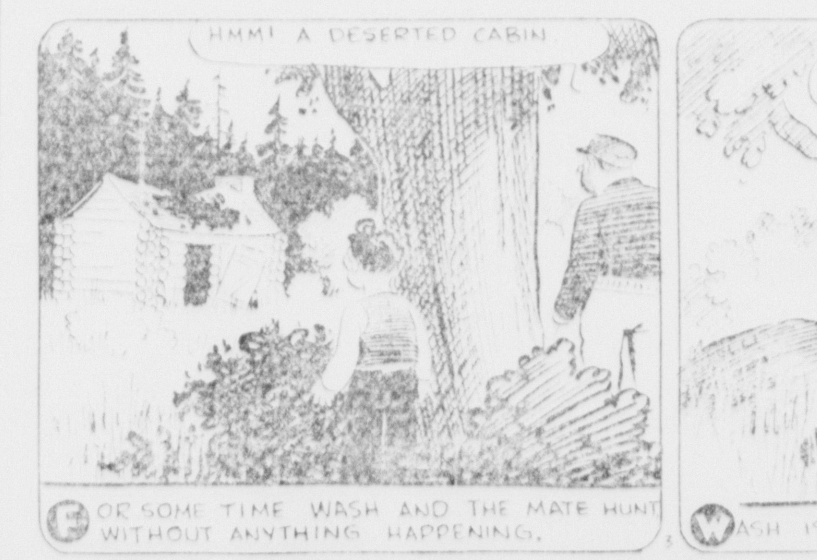

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES

WASH TUBBS

she had always wanted to bake in glass), some new sheets, a new rug for the stair, some bath towels, shirts for Bert, a suit for Sexton, a new white porcelain sink for the kitchen.

"Wow!" said young Jim when the $100 had been spent at least four times. Everyone laughed—Elinor with the rest but unsteadily.

"You haven't told us, Elinor," Bessie was saying, "what you're going to do with your $10. I do wish, dear, it had been more for you!"

"I'm going to blow it in on a party that we'll have here!" Elinor answered. Sexton let out a whoop. "Ice cream and everything!" she added, smiling at her youngest cousin.

"Cousin Elinor, can we have that kind of cake you get at the German shop on Hays street? You know—it was whipped cream on it and jelly inside!" Sexton said excitedly.

"Certainly!" she assured him. "We'll have that cake!"

Lida, meantime, was having a bad half hour. Vance Carter had pushed past Benson to reach her, although she had given the strictest orders about receiving no one.

He found her curled up on a chaise longue in the drawing room, looking frightfully untidy and showing the rage and tears that she had shed.

"Darling!" he whispered unsteadily, reaching her.

She sat erect, frightened, angry because he had come. He took her hot hands.

"Some one may hear!" she warned.

He laughed the brimming, assured laugh of a man who feels that he is near his goal. "They'll all know how it is—has been—with us soon anyhow," he stated. "You know that!"

She sank back. He was obviously going to be very difficult! "You'll start your suit soon?" he asked, bending toward her, his eyes narrowed.

"I—I don't know, Vance—" "Why?"

"Bentwell depends on me so!" she confided with nervous haste. "After we came in from the funeral he told me how much I mean to him. He's threatened my life if I leave him!"

"Lida!"

"I can't seem to see any way out! I can't bring myself to give him that blow just now. Vance has been—so disappointed! Aunt Ella left him $100!"

"But you said—" "I know, dear, but how could I foresee?"

"I'm not going to let anything keep us apart!" Vance said. Lida had not known that his chin could be so hard.

"Oh, dear!" she whimpered. She covered her face.

When Vance left an hour later he realized that she was firm in her resolve not to ask for a divorce. Miserable, he hurried to his favorite speakeasy. Two cocktails and he felt somewhat cheered.

"Another, Joe."

"Yes, sir."

An hour later he was unsteady

on his feet but certain otherwise and smiling grimly. He summoned a taxicab and went to his rooms. There he took from a desk drawer a small Spanish revolver and inspected it.

"All right," he murmured thickly. He put it into a pocket, returned to the street once more and to his waiting cab.

"Where to?" the driver asked. "Park avenue. Know the number?"

However, with a second's thought he had it. Wilkins, spelling the night doorman, opened the taxicab door. It was that Carter man again, he saw. The one who had been coming there so much to see Mrs. Stafford. And more "shot" than usual, too.

Smiling cynically, Wilkins watched Vance Carter lurch toward the elevators. "Swell gang they are!" the doorman thought. "And a swell chance that nice girl has!"

He wished old Miss Sexton had left the girl something. Already the news of the will had spread, with Lida screaming as she had before the servants.

Wilkins saw Vance Carter fumbling in a rear pocket as he stepped into the elevator that had come rushing down in response to his ring. Wilkins supposed, he was reaching for a flask. "You need another drink!" Wilkins thought scornfully. "If you

Escanaba will awake this morning to participate in one of the biggest Independence Day celebrations in the history of the city. The celebration was formally opened last night when the Marquette band, the Marquette city band and the Marquette home band arrived in the city. Following their arrival at the North Western station, the bands marched through the business section, led by Mayor O. P. Chatfield, marching at the head of the column, with Ald. Joseph E. Pryal and C. W. Olmsted, with Dr. W. J. Firkus as marshal of the day.

John A. Fisher, formerly of this city, North Western engineer, running between this city and Ishpeming, will qualify today as one of Ishpeming's earliest settlers at the homecoming celebration in that city today. Mr. Fisher's father built what is known as the Crowley building in Ishpeming in the early sixties and because of the part played by his father in the early history of that town Mr. Fisher will be one of the honored guests of that city today.

The absence of a city band in Escanaba this year forced those in charge of the Fourth of July celebration to send outside for bands to participate in the big Fourth of July celebration. In order that this defect may be remedied as quickly as possible, John I. Sourwin, leader of many successful bands in past years, has undertaken the work of organizing a band of high caliber here.

To cope with their ever increasing ice cream parlor business, the Hovler Baking Company has added six new booths to an already handsome establishment.

WEST WELCOMES BEER'S RETURN

Pacific Coast Farmers Are Increasing Acreage of Hops

This is the last of four stories, based on a nationwide survey, describing the return of legalized beer in different sections of the country.

BY JOHN M. GLEISSNER

NEA Service Writer.

Denver, Reno, Helena, San Francisco and other cities in the great open spaces of the west have resumed their beer-drinking on an old-time scale.

Colorado, in particular, has gone in for beer in a big way. Reno has old-time saloons, swinging doors and all. Many localities are getting sizable revenues from taxes, but with the exception of Colorado and California there appears to have been little increase in employment.

The Colorado state treasury has received thus far about $85,000 from license fees, counties about $25,000 and towns and cities over $100,000.

It is estimated that 1000 Coloradoans got jobs as soon as beer was legal, and that others have gone back to work since. A canvass of 16 places serving beer in Denver showed 82 additional employees at work. Three breweries are operating in the state, and eastern brewers are negotiating for construction of a new $1,000,000 plant.

Border counties near dry Kansas and dry Nebraska have difficulty in getting enough beer to meet the demand.

The Colorado law made no provision for local option, but several localities have had "bone dry" ordinances for years and courts have ruled that these apply to beer.

High Price Retards Sales in Montana

In Montana the price of beer has been high—25 cents a pint, and there have been complaints against its alcoholic content and quality. This has kept down consumption. Two breweries are operating in the state. License fees have brought Montana more than $160,000 and local jurisdictions another $100,000.

It is not expected that the beer business will greatly help employment until breweries are going full blast and quality has been improved. No county has as yet attempted to exercise local option.

Lake county remains legally dry because it is within an Indian reservation and federal authorities advised that sale of beer was not permissible. Indians do not care because they prefer whisky, but the whites are demanding beer.

Beer sale became legal in Arizona June 14. In Phoenix 250 licenses brought $10,000 to the city. Police officials of Tucson and Phoenix, the two principal cities, report a decrease in bootlegging.

Old-Fashioned Saloon Flourishes in Nevada

Nevada has no state law regulating beer, so the old-time saloon has returned with cities in control. Many speakasies have been driven out of business. There has been little increase in employment, since many beer bars are manned by persons who had worked in speakasies. Police records show a decrease in arrests for drunkenness and drunken driving.

Reno now has about 100 places selling beer, 60 of which are classed as saloons, and has collected about $10,000 in license fees. There are about 150 places selling beer in the state.

Nevada law provides for local option, but no community has invoked this option.

Like Nevada, Washington has no state law regulating beer. Cities and counties may issue licenses and impose taxes, but the amounts collected so far have not been tabulated.

Farmers Increase Hop Acreage in Washington

Several hundred men were given work renovating old breweries in Tacoma and Seattle, and a new brewery is being built at Olympia.

Farmers are planting larger acreages in hops to meet a growing demand.

Beer is sold openly in Albuquerque and elsewhere in New Mexico, but revenue schemes have not been devised. Judge Milton Helmick of the Albuquerque district has ruled that 3.2 beer is not intoxicating in fact. The state will vote Sept. 19 on beer and repeal.

Bone-dry Utah, surrounded on every side by beer states, is experiencing a clamor for the legalization of beer. The Idaho legislature recently formed the last link in the circle of wet territory by rushing through a beer bill at a special session.

California taxes beer at two cents a gallon, and is collecting at the rate of $800,000 a year. The state has had little racketeering, but numerous hard liquor speakasies have been forced out of business by legalized beer. Six breweries are operating in the state and business has picked up noticeably in many lines.

Delta Is Shown In Around Lake Tour Guide Book

Escanaba and Delta county are represented in a substantial way in the World's Fair Edition of "Michigan Scenic Highways Around Lake Michigan Tour," a guide book just published by the Magazine of Michigan Company, of Lansing, and distributed through oil stations in Southwestern Michigan and Northern Indiana.

Highways of Delta county which are described in the book are US-2, from the east boundary of the county to the intersection with M-35, north of Escanaba; M-35, from this point to Menominee county; and the county road to the Garden Peninsula. There is a half-tone illustration showing M-35 and Green Bay, between Escanaba and Menominee. Various points of interest are mentioned.

The book, as a whole consists of 128 pages, car pocket size, and is beautifully illustrated with photographs and drawings. The cover is golden-rod color, with a three-color panel showing a typical road-woods-and-lake scene in Michigan.

Altogether, nearly 60 separate highways are described in detail, but concise travelers. These give a definite idea of the scenery en route, points of interest, cities and towns with 1929 population figures, state, county and municipal parks, state forests, light-houses Coast Guard stations, golf courses, and so on, with mileage figures woven in throughout.

Instructions on "How to Use the Book" tell the reader: "You will find the main United States highways—US-12, US-31, US-131 and US-2—in the travelog descriptions. Look through the travelog covering the highway you intend to follow. This will give you information about all the things you will see along the way. Also, a number of interesting side trips are mentioned in these main travelogs. Wherever one is mentioned, a foot-note refers you to the page on which it is described. If you will turn to these pages, you may select the side trips you wish to make."

Each of the 41 photographs included in the book is numbered for your convenience. Whenever one of these scenes is specifically mentioned in the travelogs, reference is made to the number of the photograph which pictures it.

2 Regular Trains Now Operating: Service Improved

Revised time schedules for the second class mixed trains Nos. 1 and 2 and the addition of a first class motorcar passenger and mail trains Nos. 3 and 4 are provided for in the new time table No. 25, which went into effect on the Escanaba and Lake Superior railway July 2.

Speeding up of freight deliveries by 24 hours is made possible by the change in the mixed train schedule. Train No. 1, which formerly left this terminal in the morning, now departs from Wells at 4 p. m., Escanaba at 4:30 and arrives at Channing 7:45 p. m., to make connections with the Chicago and Milwaukee St. Paul railroads' freight and passenger trains.

The mixed train returning as No. 2, departs from Channing at 10 p. m. and arrives at Wells at 12:45 a. m.

The motorcar has been pressed into use to take over the schedule of Trains Nos. 1 and 2, thereby maintaining the usual mail and passenger service. As Train No. 1, the motorcar leaves Wells at 8:30 a. m., Escanaba at 9 a. m. and arrives at its destination, Ralph, at 11:16 a. m. Returning as Train No. 4, it departs from Ralph at 1:15 p. m. and arrives at Wells at 3:55 p. m.

The distance from Escanaba to Channing, according to the time table, is 63.5 miles. G. N. Harder is general manager of the Escanaba & Lake Superior railway; H. G. Essington, chief dispatcher; and E. Christensen, dispatcher.

APPEAL MADE FOR DESTITUTE

Fire Destroys Brampton Home; Family Loses Everything

Fire caused by sparks from the chimney destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Holmes, one-quarter mile south of Brampton, Sunday morning, leaving the family destitute.

An appeal was made yesterday for contributions of clothing, household goods and foodstuffs for the unfortunate family. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes have two daughters, ages 1 and 4 years. Anyone wishing to make contributions is asked to notify the sheriff's department. Phone No. 118, and someone will call for the articles and also make delivery to the destitute family.

Mr. Holmes has been unemployed for several months. The family has taken refuge in an empty store building at Brampton.

The fire broke out in the roof of the house about 9 o'clock in the morning. Although several neighbors went to the scene, they were unable to effectually battle the flames due to the fact that there was no water supply nearby.

Reach for a Lucky

—for always Luckies Please!

My reason for liking Luckies is strictly personal

After all—since I smoke quite a number of cigarettes each day—don't you think it's just as well that I lean in the right direction? Perhaps you'd call my reason for liking "Toasting" the assurance of purity it gives me—for Luckies come in rather close personal contact with me, you know. Just knowing that each puff of Lucky smoke I draw in is pure—it makes the pleasure of fragrant toasted tobacco that much greater. Certainly, purity never hurt anyone! And besides—"Luckies Please!"

because "It's toasted"

Jellied summer salads are in a process of putting the old home back on the map. With a little preparation and less cost, the careful hostess today can serve a home meal that will make all her friends ask for a return invitation to lunch or supper.

Jellied main dishes have a soothing, appealing coolness about them that the best ordinary dish lacks. You can use chicken, turkey, veal or practically any meat in a salad. But the jellied fish dish has a lightness about it that all others, excepting chicken perhaps, lack.

Have your whole meal arranged around a dish such as aspic salmon. Serve perhaps a tomato juice cocktail, or a consommé, then your jellied salmon, hot bread and beverage, then perhaps a deep dish berry pie and you have a meal that will make your guests' mouths water.

How You Make It

This is the recipe for Aspic of Salmon, New Waldorf. It serves six people lavishly.

2 Pounds Cold Boiled Salmon.
2 Quarts of consommé stock.
(Use stock salmon was cooked in, adding gelatin for the aspic jelly.)
2 Pounds mixed carrots.

1 Pound mixed cooked green vegetables, peas, lima beans, string beans, diced carrots.
Sliced cucumbers, watercress.

Using the fish stock, prepare about two quarts of fine jelly; season well and clear. Set a special mould, (about 6 inches in height, preferably one with a center division) deep in ice, and when the mould is sufficiently chilled, add one cup of the jellied consommé and roll the mould thoroughly so that the consommé will stick to the mould.

Decorate the Mould

Then, decorate the bottom of the mould with truffles, sweet peppers, or according to own taste. Add cold salmon cut in small pieces, then carrots, then more salmon, filling the mould with the jelly. In 6 small moulds (also chilled and well rolled with jelly), put the salad of mixed cooked vegetables very well seasoned.

When the salmon loaf and vegetable moulds have been thoroughly jellied, turn on cold silver platter, decorate platter with sliced cucumber and watercress.

Racine-Hough
At one of the prettiest weddings of the season, Miss Dora Racine, daughter of Mrs. Edward Racine of Gwin, yesterday became the bride of J. Gordon Hough, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Hough of Dawson, N. D.

The ceremony was performed at a solemn nuptial high mass at 8 o'clock in All Saints' Catholic church, Rev. Fr. Sebastian, pastor of the All Saints' church, reading the vows. Rev. Fr. Ovid LaMothe of Rapid River was the celebrant at the mass and he was assisted by Rev. Fr. Gerald Harrington of Escanaba who served as deacon and Rev. Maier who served as sub-deacon. The Rev. Fr. C. J. Petronick of Ironwood was master of ceremonies.

Attending the couple were Miss Rose Stock, close friend of the bride, and Forrest A. Hough, brother of the groom.

Miss Racine was charming in a white satin gown with jacket of lace and wore a veil of white tulle. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath. Her bridesmaid's gown was of pale yellow mouseline de soie. She wore a large hat to match and long white gloves. Her flowers were pink roses and yellow snapdragons tied with yellow and pink ribbon. The flower girls were dressed in white dresses and wore white ribbons in their hair. They carried baskets of baby's breath and pink roses.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at "Fondue" tea room, Escanaba, for the relatives and guests, covers being laid for seventeen.

Mr. and Mrs. Hough left early yesterday afternoon on a wedding trip to Milwaukee, Chicago, and various points in lower Michigan. Upon their return they will make their home at 1124 Michigan avenue.

The bride, a graduate of the Gwin high school, has attended Ferris Institute, Big Rapids, and has been employed in the office of Atty. G. R. Empon for the past nine years. The groom is associated with the J. C. Penny company in Gladstone. He attended North Dakota State college at Fargo, N. D., and is a member of Delta Kappa Sigma Fraternity. HOME LOANS TO
BE EXPEDITED
Preliminary Applications
To Be Received by
A. T. Sohberg

Organization of a Delta county committee for the purpose of accelerating and considering applications for home loans under the Federal Home Loan Act, which has recently become a law, has been effected according to an announcement coming from the office of A. T. Sohberg of this city.

The committee consists of the following members: John M. Olson, Gladstone, chairman; Oscar Kraus, Escanaba, Secretary; B. R. Micks, Gladstone; Glenn W. Jackson, Gladstone; William Warrington, Escanaba; William Schmitt, Escanaba.

The purpose of setting up the committee is to afford the Federal Home Loan Corporation an agency in Delta county and also to insure prompt and efficient service to the public and to the government as soon as the rules and regulations of the Home Loan Corporation have been prepared. Information as to the personnel and plans of the committee has already been forwarded to the Home Loan Bank.

It is also the intention of the committee to receive and file preliminary applications upon a form which is being prepared for that purpose.

Will Speed Work
The committee was impressed with the need for quick action in order that the community may be properly served. While congress is authorized to issue bonds up to 2 billion dollars, the total mortgage indebtedness upon homes through out the country amounts to twenty billion dollars.

Persons desiring to take advantage of the Home Loan Act should apply to A. T. Sohberg for a preliminary application form and immediately upon the issuance of instructions from the corporation, each applicant will be notified and his needs given immediate attention.

"It is evidence of the effect of promptness in having the organization ready," Mr. Sohberg stated yesterday, "that recent information given out by the Regional Agricultural Credit corporation of Minneapolis makes it known that only 355 so-called barnyard loans have been closed in the entire state of Michigan. At the time this information was given out there had been 261 applications referred to me for inspection, so it is apparent, so far as Michigan is concerned, this full benefit of the A. C. C. loans has been received in Delta, Schoolcraft, Menominee and Chippewa counties, and it is safe to say that two hundred thousand dollars of this money has been made available to farmers in these counties which has served to liquidate a great many accounts of long standing with merchants, banks and private creditors. I believe the effect has been generally beneficial throughout these counties. It is our desire to be prepared in the same way whenever the Home Loan Corporation is ready to transact business."

Battle Grass Blaze on Bluff Sunday

Fire, believed to have started from chimney sparks, Sunday morning destroyed the home of Victor Holm at Brampton. The loss is estimated at $600. No insurance was carried. It is reported that the furniture and personal effects were carried from the home before it was consumed. The Gladstone fire department was called to the scene, the regulars and volunteers responding, but the blaze had such a start before they arrived that little could be done but to prevent its spread. A grass fire on the bluff south of the cemetery also was kept from a loss two hours Sunday afternoon. Called out about 5 o'clock the crew which included 15 volunteers, besides the regulars, had a tough battle, a strong wind fanning the flames. Throwing up of fire lines with a conservation department tractor and pump which was rushed to the scene, finally brought the blaze under control.

DIAMOND BALL
ENTRIES IDLE
No Games Scheduled
This Week; Cleaners
Lead First Half

TEAM STANDINGS

TEAM	W.	L.	PCT.
Cleaners	5	1	.833
Shiners	3	4	.429
Fords	6	5	.545
Nortons	4	7	.364
Barkers	5	7	.364

With the first half of the Manistique Diamond Ball league schedule brought to a close, the Cleaners are firmly entrenched in first place by a margin of two and one-half games. The Shiner Oil hold down second place by a game margin over the Fords, while Nortons are trailing the latter team by two games. By annexing another win last week, Barkers came within a half game of tying the Nortons.

The Manistique Cleaners and Barker bakers, first and last place teams, were the only organizations in the league to attain perfect percentages in last week's games, each winning single contests. Both the Fords and the Oil broke even in two games although the latter gained half a game on the Fords when league officials voted to give the Oil credit for a forfeited game which was to have been played against Lanermans in the early part of the season. Lanermans since have dropped out of the league. The biggest upset in last week's play was the defeat of the Fords at the hands of the last place Barkers.

No league games have been scheduled for this week, on account of the Fourth of July holiday today which would have broken in on the schedule during the first part of the week because of players having two-day vacations. The schedule will be resumed next week beginning Monday, July 10, when the second half of the season will get under way.

Big Spring Water
And Sand Analyzed

A quantitative analysis of the sand and a qualitative analysis of the water of Kitch-iti-kipi, The Big Spring, were recently made by Professor James W. Boynton, chemistry teacher at Western State Teachers college, a nephew of John L. Bellaire, local merchant.

The qualitative analysis of the water showed that it contains iron, carbonate, calcium chloride, magnesium sulphate and sodium. Although Professor Boynton is of the opinion that iron occurs naturally in the water, he does not believe that all of the iron as revealed in the test is from the Big Spring as the sample of the water was sent in a tin covered iron can, the tin being corroded and exposing the iron to the water.

Explaining the chemical action which takes place when a bottle of the sand stands in sunlight and turns dark, Professor Boynton declared that the phenomenon was because the organic matter in the water reduced some of the iron to the ferrous salt and in turn combined with the ferric salt to form the colored compound Professor Boynton noticed that if the bottle is open to the air and only partially filled with moist sand, that the parts where the air can get at it remain colorless, while that portion cut off of contact with the air became dark.

Such combinations are more common than is appreciated, Professor Boynton stated. The reason is that the portions exposed to the air were colorless is due to the fact that all of the iron was oxidized to the ferric state and in such minute quantities would be practically colorless.

The quantitative analysis of the sand is as follows:
Loss on ignition, 15.65 per cent silica (sand), 63.66 per cent Fe2O3, 9.17 per cent CaO, 18.71 per cent MgO 1.66 per cent.

The Fe2O3 is a symbolic representation of a mixture of iron oxides. It is presumed that the amount of the other oxides other than iron is very small, so that the Fe2O3 probably measures the approximate amount of iron as its oxide. CaO is calcium reported as the oxide, and MgO is the magnesium reported as the oxide.

A quantitative analysis of the water will be made next fall when a five gallon sample will be shipped in a glass carboy.

Vines Will Face Cochet in Wimbledon Tourney

FRENCH MARVEL BEATS STOEFFEN

Crawford Is Expected to Reach to Finals in Lower Bracket

Wimbledon, Eng., July 3. (AP)—Henri Cochet, French marvel whose command of the tennis world has been shaken by two powerful youngsters, Ellsworth Vines, of California, and Jack Crawford, of Australia, moved today into a position where he can engage himself on both in the closing rounds of the historic Wimbledon championships.

He will battle Vines, his conqueror in straight sets last summer in the final round of the United States mens singles championship, in the first of Wimbledon's semi-finals late this week and if successful in all probability will meet Crawford, who likewise triumphed him in straight sets for the French championship a few weeks ago, in the final round.

For the third straight time Cochet advanced today through defeat of an American, winning from his lesser Stoen, California, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-1, adding to his scalp to those of Clayton Lee Burwell, the Carolinian, and David Jones, the New Yorker.

Vines paraded into the semi-finals with a four set conquest of the giant Czechoslovakian, Roderich Menzel, 6-2, 6-4, 3-6, 9-3. Vines and Cochet meet in the upper half of the draw.

Cochet Spectacular
In the lower bracket, Crawford swept in straight sets through the veteran English Davis cup player, George Patrick Hughes, 6-1, 6-1, 7-5, this qualifying for the second semi-final, where he will meet Jiro Satoh, the agile little Japanese who scored a distinct upset today eliminating Henry "Bunny" Austin, of England, 7-5, 6-3, 2-6, 2-6, 6-2. Crawford is a heavy favorite to beat Satoh and thus face the winner of the Vines-Cochet match in the final round.

Taking Wimbledon play seriously for the first time in years, Cochet regained much of the old time brilliance experts thought he had lost forever as he toyed with the giant Stoen after the first set.

While Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, a favorite to win her sixth Wimbledon singles crown, paraded high her quarter final match with Miss Lorette Payot, of Switzerland, 6-4, 6-1, two other American girls advanced in the doubles play.

Helen Jacobs, United States champion, advanced with Don Turnbull, of Australia to the third round of the mixed doubles by defeating A. Jacobsen and Miss Burgess-Smith, of England, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Mrs. Dorothy Andrus Burke, of Richmond, Conn., and her English partner, Maureen Thomas, won a second round match in the women's doubles from Miss M. K. Phayre and Mrs. O. L. Webb, of England, 6-2, 6-3.

The American male contingent was less successful in the doubles. Jones, the former Columbia star, figuring in two defeats. Teamed with Clayton Lee Burwell, former Sewanee player now studying with him in England, the pair went down before France's veteran Davis cup team of Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4, while Jones and Miss Lucia Valerio, of Italy, were eliminated from the mixed doubles by R. Nunoi, of Japan, and Susan Noel, of England, 6-8, 6-3, 6-1.

New York Giants Boost League Lead

Boston, July 3. (AP)—Hal Schumacher just missed pitching his sixth shutout of the season today when his support weakened in the ninth inning as the New York Giants defeated the Boston Braves 5 to 2 in the first game of their long road trip. The victory increased the Giants' lead over the idle Cardinals to six full games.

A three-run attack in the fifth featuring Johnny Vergez' double and Joe Moore's single, sent Falenstein to the showers. Old Tom Zachary took over the hurling duties, but Bobby Brown, making his first appearance of the season, hurled the last two innings and held the Giants hitless.

Marberry Turns in Good Performance for the Bengals

St. Louis, July 3. (AP)—The Detroit Tigers won on a batting rampage today, garnering seven-run hits and defeating the St. Louis Browns 8 to 5, in the first game of the series.

All three Brown pitchers—Coffman, McDonald and Stiles—were hit hard. Fox, Owen and Gehring each got three hits. Fox's trio including a triple and a home run.

Fred Marberry, fast developing into Buckey Harris' pitching ace, gave another good exhibition. He ended a heavy hitting streak for the Browns, holding them to six blows. For five innings Coffman threatened to make the game an interesting pitching duel. It was not until the sixth, with the score two to one, that the Tigers cut loose to shell him from the mound.

Every member of the Tiger crew got at least one hit. Fox, supplying the knockout wallop when he hit a triple with two on in the sixth frame.

AMERICAN AGES SHOOTING WELL

British Open Qualifying Rounds Begun, Gene Defends Title

BY FRANK E. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
St. Andrews, Scotland, July 3. (AP)—Brilliant 71's by young George Dunlop and Horton Smith and a 72 by Bill Burke today featured the first day of qualifying play in the British open golf championship as American players swept across the parched surfaces of historic St. Andrews to place six low scorers among the first eleven.

Only the veteran Irish professional William (Pat) Nolan, with a late 71 on the new course, came up to share the spotlight with the United States contingent as the leading players of all the world fought hard-baked fairways and greens, humid weather and vagrant Scottish breezes through the long day.

Sarazen Shoots 73
Scores mounted under the trying conditions and it seemed 160 would be enough to qualify to play tomorrow among the low 100 and ties for the championship proper leaving only Craig Wood, Joe Egar and Robert Sweeney of the 15 Americans on the qualifying border line. Wood had an 82, Egar, the "Wild Texan" from Waco, an 81 and Sweeney, American resident of London, 86.

Close behind the three leading Americans were Gene Sarazen, defending the title he won last year at Sandwich with the record total of 283, Joe Kirkwood and Big Olin Dutra, with 73's. Walter Hagen, 74, Denmore Shute and Leo Diegel 75, Johnny Farrell and Paul Runyan, 77, and Ed Dudley, 78.

Chief among the home defenders of the title a Briton has not won since 1923 were Orehle Compton, Laurie Ayton and Fred Hobson, all bracketed at 73. Abe Mitchell, George Duncan, Alf Padgham and Henry Cotton at 74, Rex Hartley at 75 and the former British amateur champion, Johnny De Forest, at 76.

C. Ross Somerville, Canadian holder of the United States amateur title, took a 78 for his first round.

He banged drive after drive down the long, narrow alleys, pitched or ran up his second shots over hummocks and humps to the greens and putted easily and confidently. The result was that he was off the course only twice the whole round and no matter where his second shots went he chipped or putted so that he had a little work left to do with his putter.

Smith played more or less the same kind of golf, although he left himself several long putts and had to finish with a birdie three on the 389-yard 18th hole to tie Dutra.

The new course, where Dunlop, Smith, Hagen, Dutra, Runyan, Farrell and Diegel played is considered by the local experts to be from one to two strokes harder than the old where Burke led the field but the scores failed to reveal any great difference between the two courses.

Burke certainly played "perfect" golf to take his 72, one under par, and only Sarazen had a chance of beating him. Gene came to the last hole needing a three to tie Burke and went boldly for it but he overran the green and ended up with a five.

Well-scattered galleries of some 4,000 persons watched the play and gave the army of stewards, police, caretakers and gatekeepers little trouble, elaborate precautions had been made to avoid such mob scenes as attended Bobby Jones' last amateur triumph here in 1920 but they were not needed today. For the first time in its history the course was roped off and admission charged.

The field was evenly divided today between the two courses and tomorrow they will shift over. The low 100 and ties at the end of the 36 qualifying holes will begin the tournament proper over the championship course Wednesday with the field further cut to the low 80 and ties Thursday night for the last two rounds Friday.

Behind the stellar pitting of Frederickson, the Spartans won two games from the Five and Dimes at Gladstone yesterday afternoon, 6 to 5 and 4 to 3. Frederickson struck out 19 men in the two games and allowed a total of but 16 hits. Batteries for the Gladstone team in the first game were: Cole, Pelkey and Nevean and in the nightcap Pelkey and Frasher handled the ball. Eliason caught both games for the Spartans.

Six Delta Veterans Are Selected For Conservation Corps

Delta county has filled its quota of six war veterans, who were allowed to enroll in the Civilian Conservation Corps, N. P. Thompson, U. S. P. representative of the state department of labor and industry, announced yesterday.

The veterans, selected, were: Mitchell Novak, 322 Stephenson avenue; Jack Emikovic, 314 Stephenson avenue; Walter Decent, Wells; George Lambert, Escanaba; Joseph Fish and Laurence Nebel, Gladstone. The men are now undergoing a conditioning process at Fort Brady, following which they will be assigned to forestry camps.

The enrolling of 25,000 war veterans for the conservation service was completed last week throughout the United States.

AMUSEMENTS

Edward G. Robinson, whose "Little Caesar" characterization will ever be regarded as one of the finest ever shown on the screen, is back again as a gangster in First National's comedy drama, "The Little Giant," which opened last night at the Delta theatre before a packed audience that came out of the theatre singing the praises of the star and the picture. It's a knockout comedy drama, with the star at his very best.

Lost you get the wrong impression, we hasten to add Robinson is really not quite a gangster in the "Little Caesar" sense of the word, and neither is "The Little Giant," heavy drama. In fact Robinson is a comedian, and the picture is one of the funniest comedies we have seen.

Just as so many recent fine pictures which have come out of the Warner Bros.-First National studios dealt with unusually timely and interesting topics, so does "The Little Giant," deal with a timely subject—that of a beer baron, who sees the handwriting on the wall when President Roosevelt is elected, and quits the racket to take a fling at being a gentleman and a social climber.

Wednesday's Program

James Cagney, the bad boy of the screen, comes to the Delta theatre Wednesday in his latest Warner Bros. production, "Picture Snatcher," in a thoroughly hard boiled role, although a delightfully entertaining one.

"Picture Snatcher" is based on a newspaper story by Danny Abraham, which treats of a little known phase of the work on a yellow tabloid of the most sensational type. Jimmy, in the title role, is the go-getter picture man who gets photographs of people and news events by hook or crook, regardless of ethics or common decency.

Wood Pulp Will Be Loaded On Steamer

Newberry, July 3—The steamer Uhrig, commanded by Captain Radcliffe from Sheboygan, Wis., will arrive at Little Lake in the north-eastern part of Luce county today to take on a load of 2,000 bundles of wood pulp. The bundles each holding a cord, have been landed at the dock of the Lynch camps and are bound for Green Bay for use of the Thimany Paper company of Kokomo. They will be floated through the straits at the neck of the lake into Lake Superior and will be loaded into the boat hold and onto the deck with machinery. The loading is expected to take 36 hours. This is the first of the 350 mile trips this boat has made this season. Hereafter it is expected to make a round trip each week.

The banding of the pulp wood into cord bundles each 11 feet long, the handling of them in this form by water is an experiment undertaken by officials of the paper company, which, according to W. R. Harwood, is expected to cut production prices and to make commercial history. At present around 30 men are working on the project, cutting and handling the jack pine pulp timber, banding and on the booms.

Dozens of the C. C. C. boys have gone to their homes for the long vacation which includes one and a half days leave saved up, together with Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday. Payday, much hoped for on Friday, was delayed, so that many who had planned to leave had to give it up. Several groups however, in trucks and through the kindness of travelers, managed to make the trip. The pay is expected to come through today.

Stores will be closed during the day with the exception of restaurants and drug stores.

TAX AGENCIES TO BE MERGED

Stack Discloses Plan to Cut Cost of Collecting Money

Consolidation of the various agencies for the handling of the sales, beer, malt, weight and other special taxes so as to effect a saving of about one and a half million dollars in the cost of collecting these public monies is now being planned by the state administration, it was disclosed by Auditor General John K. Stack, Jr., who with Mrs. Stack is visiting over the holidays with his mother, Mrs. John K. Stack, on Lake Shore Drive.

John K. Stack

Mr. Stack disclosed that Governor William A. Comstock will advocate legislation for carrying out this plan at the next special session of the legislature, which he expected would be called by the governor to convene in November. In the meantime, whatever consolidation is possible without legislative consent will be put through by the new tax commission and James E. Mogan, managing director.

Mogan Has Hands Full

"Mr. Mogan has a big job on his hands, but we feel that he will be a very good tax collector," Mr. Stack stated. "The commission expects, to be sure, that there will be evasions of the sales tax law and losses of legitimate tax revenue at the start, but we feel confident that some efficient collecting will be done before a few weeks. These inspectors will be all high grade men, chosen mainly for their ability to handle their work with the utmost of satisfaction. We want to save money for the taxpayers of Michigan while we are down in Lansing."

Has Penchant for Economy

Saving the taxpayers' money is no idle campaign promise with Auditor General Stack. Already, he has demonstrated that he intends to abide by the principle while he is in office, regardless of political consequences.

When he ordered the cancellation of delinquent tax descriptions in the newspapers, he faced the possibility of serving a jail term for contempt of court. He has adhered religiously to a policy of finding out the true nature of any expenditure item before a check is payment is issued from the auditor general's office.

Dust Layer Deal

He has also developed to be what may be called a good horse trader or shrewd bargainer. This was revealed in the highway dust layer controversy, from which he emerged with flying colors.

About 100,000 tons of calcium chloride are used annually to cover the roads of Michigan, 30,000 tons being purchased by the state and the other 70,000 tons by the smaller governmental units. Back in the boom days of 1929, the state was forced to pay to the large chemical companies supplying this dust layer material the price of $24.75 per ton. This price remained the same during the price deflation period of 1930 and 1931, but was reduced to $22.50 per ton in 1932.

Mr. Stack contended, however, while sitting with the administrative board a few weeks ago, that this price was outrageously high, and wrote to the chemical companies that in view of present price levels they should cut off $6 or more.

State Saved $90,000

There was some criticism of Mr. Stack's demand for such a price reduction, and at that juncture in the controversy, the auditor general hurled the threat that oil would be used instead of calcium chloride as a dust layer. One contract was let for the Roosevelt Oil company of Mt. Pleasant for covering of 179 miles of Midland county, in which the Dow Chemical company is located, with the oil mixture. The negotiations were finally settled with the chemical companies agreeing to furnish calcium chloride at a compromise figure of $19.50 a ton. The reduction of three dollars per ton meant a saving of $90,000 to the state on its dust layer requirements, while the reduction of the bill to the other governmental units amounted to approximately $210,000.
